

6 Million Children Who Had No Health Insurance Now Have Coverage

Senator Harry Reid Got It Right When He Made Sure Congress Funded The Children's Health Insurance Program

It is called the Childrens Health Insurance Program and it has been a huge success.

It has enabled 40,000 children in Nevada to get health insurance coverage whose families couldn't afford it.

Now kids throughout Nevada are getting the medical treatment they need when they get sick as well as vaccinations and tests to prevent future illnesses.

Harry Reid understands health care costs increase for everyone as the number of Americans without health care coverage rises.

People without insurance are more likely to forego cost-effective preventive treatments and to seek care in an emergency room where it is more expensive.

Harry Reid is fighting to make sure Washington continues to fund the Children's Health Insurance Program and to improve it so more Nevadans can get health insurance.

You hear a lot of promises from politicians when they are campaigning for office.
